How much of your work day is spent paying tax?

We all pay tax – but just how much of the time we spend at work goes to them, and what exactly are we paying for? IOL has found the Tax Clock, an online tool developed by Code for South Africa, which lets you look at your tax contribution in a different way. By entering your annual income (before tax), you can see, minute-by-minute, the time you spend contributing to government services, such as education, health or national debt – and the time that you’re working for yourself.

Enter your salary into the calculator below and see how much of your time goes towards your tax. The clock uses the latest personal tax details as per the 2016 budget speech given by Finance Minister Pravin Gordhan on 24 February.
What is your annual income* (before tax)?

R 100000

* This should be your income before tax but after deductions such as pension and medical aid.
